About Me

I am a Part 1 graduate of Architecture hailing from the Peak District in the UK. I moved to Berlin in February to complete some research for my thesis project and loved the city so much that I have decided to stay. I am an enthusiastic team-member and a creative thinker with an eye for detail. I love finding simple solutions to tricky problems; that moment of relief when everything clicks into place.

English is my first language while my German is currently at a conversational level, I am looking forward to the challenge of working in Berlin to improve my German language skills. I am determined to stay in Berlin until I am fluent in German!

My Skills

Architecture Profile

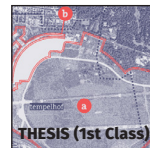

I see architecture as a discipline within the vastly diverse field of design, where a multi-disciplined and collaborative approach is key. I am driven by design that is conscious of its context in place but also within society; architecture that can be used as a tool for civic creation, engagement and participation. My recent research in Berlin and Northern England, has led me down a path of grass-roots projects that seek to progressively re-use and re-imagine existing spaces for community benefit.

I am excited by hands-on design projects and architectural practice that integrates the user with the creation process. My most recent work embodies these passions:

Freespace Workshop
Community creativity and workshop space

Re-use Mechanisms:
Transitional Praxis in Berlin's Liminal Spaces
